Conservative Chosun Ilbo carried an inside-page report speculating that North Korean leader Kim Jong-il may make an announcement during Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao's Oct. 4-6 visit to Pyongyang that could provide major momentum to resuming the stalled nuclear negotiations.

The report noted that the North Korean leader told visiting Chinese State Councilor Dai Bingguo on Sept. 18 that his country is willing to engage in bilateral and multilateral talks to resolve its nuclear issue. The report quoted an ROKG source as saying: "North Korea will have to give a visiting senior Chinese leader some kind of gift. Leader Kim Jong-il is apparently under heavy pressure from Wen's upcoming visit, especially given that Wen cancelled a visit to the North in the wake of its second nuclear test on May 25."

State-run KBS filed a similar report.

Right-of-center JoongAng Ilbo quoted a senior Foreign Ministry official as saying yesterday that the core of President Lee's "grand bargain" with North Korea is to advance the dismantlement of the North's nuclear weapons and materials. He went on to say: "There is no alternative to the dismantlement of North Korea's nuclear program."

KIM JONG-IL TO MEET CHINESE PREMIER IN EARLY OCTOBER
(Chosun Ilbo, September 29, 2009, Page 5)

By Reporter Lim Min-hyuk

Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao will visit North Korea on Oct. 4-6, raising expectations that Pyongyang will take the opportunity to announce its return to Six-Party nuclear talks.

During a visit from Chinese State Councilor Dai Bingguo, an envoy for President Hu Jintao, on Sept. 18, North Korean leader Kim Jong-il said he was "willing to engage in bilateral and multilateral talks" on the nuclear program. Speculation has it that Wen, as the senior official, can expect a more specific commitment.

The North's official Korean Central News Agency gave unprecedented advance coverage to Wen's visit on Monday, saying it comes "in time for a ceremony on Oct. 6 to mark the 60th anniversary of diplomatic relations between the two countries." Speculation is already mounting in Beijing that "Kim Jong-il might express willingness to dismantle nuclear programs and present specific ways to do so."

A South Korean government source on Monday said, "North Korea will have to give a visiting senior Chinese leader some kind of gift. Leader Kim Jong-il is apparently under heavy pressure from Wen's upcoming visit, especially given that Wen cancelled a visit to the North in the wake of its second nuclear test on May 25."

The fact that Washington accepted (the proposal for) bilateral dialogue with Pyongyang but did not specify a detailed schedule (for the talks) is expected to serve as a catalyst for Kim Jong-il to open his mouth. An ROKG official noted, "During Wen's visit, if Kim Jong-il shows, through his comments, a different attitude regarding the resumption of the Six-Party Talks, it will smooth the way for the U.S." In that case, observers say, a visit to Pyongyang by U.S. Special Representative for North Korea Stephen Bosworth may soon be realized.

Already aware of such a possibility, the Six-Party nations are working to coordinate their stances. Deputy Secretary of State James Steinberg is making a tour of the ROK, China, and Japan from September 27 to October 1 to discuss the timing and conditions for U.S.-North Korea dialogue and the goal of a two-track strategy of pursuing dialogue as well as sanctions against the North.

On September 28, diplomatic officials from the ROK, China and Japan discussed ways to resolve the North Korean nuclear issue in Shanghai, China. Observers say that there is a high possibility that Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao may bring up issues he will discuss with Kim Jong-il (during his upcoming visit to Pyongyang) at a trilateral summit, which will take place in Beijing on October 10.

ROK authorities say that even if Kim Jong-il makes any forward-looking announcement, this will not steer the North Korean nuclear process in a direction he wants unless the North demonstrates its trustworthiness. A senior ROK official noted that in order to prevent Pyongyang from capitalizing on the ROK's trust (in the North), sanctions should remain in place through international coordination even if (U.S-North Korea) talks may be held.
